Project Description

The Bureau of East-Asian and Pacific Affairs seeks an entrepreneurial and creative intern to create a landscape of how countries in the Asia-Pacific are engaged in the various aspects of the UN system, which has 6 principal subsidiary organs and over 50 autonomous subsidiary organizations. The intern will have the opportunity to demonstrate initiative, resourcefulness, and creativity by identifying publicly available materials to gather information about membership and involvement in these organizations.

In addition, the intern will develop criteria and method for identifying and tracking key ongoing events such as resolutions, meeting minutes, elections, and programs. The intern will use this information to create a regular tracker to help keep U.S. government officials apprised of various issues that may impact policy decisions in the Asia-Pacific. The intern will use their skills to ensure that the tracker is useful and easy to navigate.
